GENERAL NEWS.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN

Death of Gen Joseph Hooker

GARDEN CITY Oct 31—Major General Joseph Hooker [illegible] had been in his usual good health [illegible] hour before his death and purposed going to New York to morrow to attend his [illegible] matters. He gave a large dinner party at Garden City Hotel on the [illegible] and seemed to be in the best spirits and to enjoy social intercourse with his many friends as fully as at any time during his life. He took his accustomed walk in the park [illegible] afternoon and did not complain when he returned to his apartments and summoned [illegible] valet, who helped him to a sofa where he rested about an hour. He then rose and seated himself about his rooms till [illegible] [illegible] hearing the general struggling for breath hastened to his side and assisted him [illegible] down upon the bed at the same time ringing for help. The hotel superintendent hurried to the room but when he arrived the general was dead.

NEW YORK Nov 2.—The governor's room in the city hall has been set apart for the purpose of having the remains of General Hooker lie in state

Fire in Progress at Mound City

CAIRO, Nov 2.—A fire at Mound City this afternoon destroyed over one third of the town. A telegram was received here at 3 [illegible] asking assistance and in response three fire engines were promptly dispatched by rail. The fire had gained too great head way for the fire department to accomplish anything more than to prevent its spread. From sixty to eighty houses were burned among which are the court house with all records.

Escape of Counterfeiters.

NEW YORK, Nov 2—Seven counterfeiters were sentenced yesterday in the U S court for passing trade dollars and notes All were to be taken to the Albany penitentiary to day When the deputy marshal went to receive his prisoners he found five had escaped

Vessels Overdue at New York

Revival of Business at Memphis

MEMPHIS, Nov 2—No new cases have been reported since Thursday Last night was the coldest of the season The thermometer at seven o'clock this morning had fallen to 37. The Appeal and Avalanche will both resume publication of full sized issues to morrow. Merchants report a rush of business and physicians all agree that the cold winds of last night swept away all lingering germs of fever.

Fire Damp Explosion

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov 2.—An explosion of fire damp occurred in the Delaware and Hudson mines at Mill Creek, Pa this morning George Wasma, Daniel Rupp and J [illegible] have been taken out dead Two men [illegible] in the mine were believed to be killed [illegible] were all dead when found and their bodies were fearfully mangled The remains were hoisted to the surface amidst the weeping and lamentations of the friends and relatives of the unfortunate men It cannot be definitely ascertained how the catastrophe occurred. It is thought however, that a flame from one of the miners lamps came in contact with the gas.

THE UTE WAR.

Gen. Adams and a Companion, Mistaken for Indians, Narrowly Escape the Bullets of the Troops.

LOS PINOS, Col, Oct 29 via DEL NORTE Nov 1.—General Adams and Count Doenhoff have just arrived from White river They succeeded in reaching General Merritt's command, although it was attended with much difficulty and came near costing them their lives. The troops had deployed and were advancing to recover the body of Lieut [illegible] killed eleven days previous while on a [illegible]. Two military horsemen advancing a [illegible] company was deployed to give them battle. A scout had reported that Adams and his escort of twenty three Indians were over two hundred strong. The Indians not pleased with the outlook had retired to a safe distance, leaving General Adams and Count Doenhoff alone An officer chanced to discover the flag of truce just as the troops had covered them with their rifles for the fatal shot. It was a close call Gen Adams and his escort have had a rough time They came back from White river, a distance of 90 miles, in four days, having traveled over mountain trails. The pluck and energy of General Adams and Count Doenhoff are truly commendable. Men of less energy would have signally failed. General Adams is of the opinion that the affair will be amicably settled by the surrender of the guilty parties in accordance with the wishes of the interior department.

Guilty Utes to be Surrendered—Probable Disposition of the Tribe

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1—The news received to night that the White River Utes are willing to surrender for punishment the members of their tribe who murdered Agent Meeker and his employes inspire both civil and military officials in Washington with confident hope that all Indian difficulties in Colorado may soon be permanently ended There appears to be a very general belief in official circles that one certain outcome of events which have already taken place will be the restoration of a very large portion of the Ute reservation to the public domain and consolidation of the bands upon some suitable tract in southwestern Colorado Unless indeed an arrangement still more satisfactory to the people of Colorado can be effected by securing peaceable consent of the Indians to remove wholly outside of the state boundaries. It seems more likely however that the consolidation ultimately to be made in accordance with the recommendations of the Merrill commission will be upon the Uncompahgre and Navajo rivers Aside from other manifest advantages of the removal of the White river Utes to the southward it would further carry out what has long been the policy of our government—to keep all Indians as far away as possible from the Pacific railroad, and establish a wide band of unmolested territory along that inestimably important line of communication clear across the continent.

From the Front—An Absurd Offer from the Indians

RAWLINS, Nov 2—A courier came in from the front last night with dispatches and mail. All is quiet at Merritt's camp On the 29th an Indian came to Merritt's camp to have a peace talk. He was informed that Merritt had no authority to make peace He then coolly told the general that if he would give up his arms all ammunition horses and mules, he would be allowed to leave with his men. After the Indian left the camp numerous signal fires were observed in the neighborhood of the camp Two companies of infantry will be stationed at Snake river to protect stores and furnish escorts for wagon trains with supplies for Merritt

PROFOUND SORROW AT DETROIT

Resolutions by Republican Central Committees of Chicago—The Departments Ordered to go into Mourning by President Hayes Etc Etc

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN]

CHICAGO Nov 1—Senator Zachariah Chandler of Michigan was found dead in his bed at the Grand Pacific Hotel this morning. He had been speaking in Wisconsin and last night addressed an immense audience at McCormick's Hall in this city and spoke with his usual earnestness. After the meeting when he and Senator [illegible] and [illegible] Spaulding were sitting in his room engaged in conversation Senator Chandler complained of fatigue as he had complained [illegible] [illegible] and stressing feeling which he had [illegible]. [illegible] with these gentlemen Mr Spaulding suggested that he remain over in the city until Saturday night but he said his business affairs required his attention at home and the order was given to have him called in the morning at 7 o'clock. His friends then bade him good night and left. That is the last time the senator was seen alive. This morning when the office boy called him there was no response and as upon repetition silence prevailed, the clerk effected entrance through the transom and found that he was dead. The body was not quite cold and a physician who was present decided that death occurred about three hours previous to his discovery. The face looked tranquil showing that death was painless

Dr McVeker who was immediately called is of the opinion from a partial examination that death was the result of a sudden congestion of the lungs brought about by a cold which was contracted at Janesville. The inquest will be held during the afternoon Sorrow over the sad event is universal and genuine. Flags are at half mast upon the Pacific and other hotels and public buildings The Tribune building is also in mourning The republican county central committee and federal officials together with a portion of the congressional delegation from this state the Union Veteran club and the heads of the county militia organizations held informal consultations at the Grand Pacific to tender the services of appropriate committees when ever the relatives of the deceased senator shall arrive from Michigan. The latter will probably be here during the afternoon by a special train and final arrangements cannot be made until their arrival. The speech last night is pronounced by those who are familiar with the senator's campaigns as by far the most vigorous and able of all his previous efforts

How the Sad News was Received at Detroit—Mrs Chandler Prostrated by Grief

DETROIT Nov 1—Shortly before 10 o'clock this morning a dispatch was received by ex Gov Bagley from J B Drake of the Grand Pacific Hotel Chicago announcing that Senator Zachariah Chandler had been found dead in his bed at that hotel this morning. The astounding and sorrowful news spread like wildfire and was at first generally doubted but the Drake dispatch was confirmed by telegrams to Congressman Newberry and others and the certainty was established of his sudden death. Great excitement followed the confirmation of first reports and bulletening the news, and the flags of the city were displayed at half mast, and evidences of universal grief were manifested on every hand. When Mrs Chandler came to understand the dreadful significance of the announcement she was overwhelmed with grief and has since been completely prostrated. Ex Gov Baldwin Congressman Newberry and others have made arrangements for the removal of the remains to this city by special train to morrow. A number of prominent citizens leave for Chicago by special car this evening to act as a committee of escort. Arrangements for funeral obsequies have not been made as yet but the services will probably be held on Wednesday next General Sorrow in Chicago over the Sad Event—Preamble and Resolutions by Republican Committees.

CHICAGO Nov 2—The western branch of the republican national committee the republican state central committee the Cook county republican central committee and the republican campaign executive committee of Cook county speaking on behalf and for the republicans of the northwest and of Illinois and of the county of Cook recognizing in the sudden decease of Senator Chandler of Michigan the chairman of the national republican committee a great public calamity have adopted the following preamble and resolutions

During a public career of over thirty years Senator Chandler has exhibited such splendid traits of patriotic and earnest manhood as to command the respect and challenge the admiration of the whole country. In his public career he pursued no end but the public good and was inspired by no motive but an intense love of the whole country. He hated oppression wherever he found it and counted no consequences on denouncing the oppressor. He never bartered away a right, and in government was satisfied with nothing short of absolute justice. He was a great man because he was a true man. His opinions bore the final test and are now upon the statute book and are embodied in the organic law of the land. His intellectual and moral courage never qualled and his convictions and friendships were in his very nature patriotic to the heart's core. With a head as clear as his heart was pure his public life was measured merely by his views of the public good wise in council and intrepid in action he was a great leader and a great man. He died full of honor and his last public utterances were for an honest government and an undivided nation therefore

Resolved. That we deplore the decease of Senator Chandler as a great national bereavement and a loss to the councils of the republican party and of the nation which it will be impossible to supply

That treasuring his last patriotic appeals no higher honor can be paid his fame and memory than following the utterances of his wise and earnest counsels

That we tender to the family of the great senator our most sincere sympathy in their overshadowing affliction

That these resolutions and preamble be engrossed and forwarded to the family and friends of the deceased senator

Emblems of mourning are now on nearly all public offices and the shipping. President Hayes through his secretary Rogers sends a dispatch that the announcement of the senator's death is received with a deep sense of the great loss the country has sustained

Departure of the Remains from Chicago for Detroit—Procession of Societies and Distinguished Persons

CHICAGO Nov [illegible] The last offices for [illegible] deceased Senator Chandler were performed [illegible] [illegible] in the Grand Pacific Hotel. Rev David Swing officiated and the services were necessarily very brief consisting simply of a prayer and reading from the Scripture. It needs [illegible] [illegible] the guard consisting of a detail of the first regiment formed two before and 14 after the casket which was borne out of the hotel. John B Drake Geo F Davis Jesse Spalding Wm Aldrich Hiram Barber General Martin Beem and S Collyer officiated as pall bearers. As the procession moved through the spacious corridor some 200 veterans formed in twos behind and with muffled drums beating the coffin was deposited in a hearse. Three companies of the first regiment and a detail of cadets commanded by Colonel Swain and a part of the second battalion under Colonel Thompson were drawn up on either side the entrance on Jackson street. The procession then formed in the following order. Drum corps with muffled drums beating the long roll first regiment in column of four sixth battalion band and [illegible] Haverly's band the hearse flanked by pall bearers carriages containing members of the committee appointed yesterday to escort the body to the depot Union Veteran Club employes of the sheriff's office Young Men's Auxiliary Club. The line was over two blocks long marching in close order and in fours. But for the untoward weather and the early hour it would undoubtedly have been very much longer. The day was raw and chilly, and about two inches of snow had fallen making the streets wet and slippery. The bands played the Dead March in Saul and funeral strains from old dirges

Conspicuous among the mournful procession were Gov Cullom ex Gov Oglesby Emory Storrs and Robert T Lincoln. The line of march was east on Jackson to Clark north on Clark to Washington east on Washington to Wabash avenue and north to Lake street and thence east to the depot. Arrived at the depot, the military organizations deployed allowing the casket to be borne through their ranks. The Detroit delegation headed by ex Gov Bagley had arrived at the depot some time before and had taken breakfast in the vicinity. They received the procession and together with the escort from this city accompanied to the baggage car of the special train the remains which were carefully deposited therein. The two committees then distributed themselves through three coaches making up the train which at 9 20 pulled out from the depot

DETROIT Nov 2—A special train from Chicago over the Michigan Central Railroad with the remains of the late Senator Chandler arrived here at 6 P M under escort of a delegation of prominent citizens of Detroit. The remains and escort were met at the Michigan Central depot by the Light Infantry Light Guard National Guard Montgomery Rifles and a vast concourse of citizens and escorted to the dead senator's residence on Fort street west. Gov Croswell has issued the following proclamation

EXECUTIVE OFFICE
LANSING Mich Nov 1 1879

To the People of Michigan An eminent citizen has suddenly been taken from us Zachariah Chandler was found dead in his room at the Grand Pacific Hotel in Chicago early this morning. For nineteen years he has represented this state in the national senate. He held this exalted position at the most perilous period in the history of the nation and unfalteringly supported every measure for the maintenance of the union. A member of the cabinet under the recent administration of General Grant, he proved himself a public officer of keen sagacity of incorruptible integrity and of admirable ability. A resident of Michigan during the whole period of his manhood he has been active in advancing the interests of the state and promoting its growth. By his energy he secured a competence and by his integrity the confidence of all. Taken from us so unexpectedly we cannot but deeply feel and deplore his loss. I therefore as a tribute to his memory and to his public services hereby direct the several state offices to be closed to public business their flags to be displayed at half mast and other demonstrations of public grief usual to be made on the day of his funeral

ON THE SIDE OF HONESTY

President Hayes Strongly Condemns the Attempt at Repudiation of Virginia's State Debt now being Made

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN]

RICHMOND Va Oct 31—The Intelligencer this evening publishes what it says is not a stolen interview but an outspoken and cordial statement of the views of President Hayes on the Virginia debt canvass given to the editor on a recent visit to Washington. Said the president

I have nothing to conceal or withhold from anyone and I prefer that my position should be known to all. I don't assume to command or control the votes of the republicans of Virginia or seek in a despotic way to influence the action of federal officers yet would be much surprised if republicans should ally themselves with the readjusters in your state. They should not countenance or encourage or touch any proposition or project what soever that contains even a germ of repudiation. They must not sacrifice the great principle involved in the payment of the honest debt of Virginia even though to do so would result in transient advantage over their adversaries. This is not a question of to day but of all time. Virginia is making the greatest mistake of her life. Forcible readjustment in principle is nothing less than repudiation and don't your people know that there is not an honorable man in the whole north who will be likely to settle in your state unless you act the part of honest men and pay what you owe. Here in Washington I am living so near to your state that I almost feel that I am within its territory and my interest has been much aroused by your troubles. Indeed in a speech which I made in [illegible] a few weeks ago I had Virginia and its [illegible] almost solely in my mind when I dwelt on the enormous wrong and injury of repudiation in all its forms and that speech I sent to [illegible] that this portion of it [illegible] ing to a part of it marked that he and all others interested might understand my feelings about the controversy in Virginia. My views on the general subject are those which I know are entertained by General Grant, Senator Blaine Secretary Sherman and all other leading republicans in every part of the north east and west and surely southern republicans will not place themselves in opposition to such leaders

The Intelligencer states that the president said a great deal more on the subject and finally inquired if federal officials [illegible] the district attorney and collectors of customs at Richmond Norfolk and Harrisonburg and the collectors of internal revenue at Petersburg Richmond and other points and [illegible] and other important [illegible] in the state were not supporting the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to hear that they were [illegible] [illegible] the colored people of Virginia would not be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] party [illegible]

GRANT AT OMAHA

EXTRAORDINARY DEMONSTRATIONS IN HIS HONOR

Immense Concourse—Escorted by a Committee from Cheyenne—Incidents of the Trip Grand Procession and Banquet Etc Etc

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN]

OMAHA Nov 1—The [illegible] opened bleak and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] street giving promise of a disagreeable day for the long expected festival [illegible] General Grant. At about 10 o'clock however the wind [illegible] time and the sun came out from behind the clouds for a brief period as if to grace the [illegible] with his special presence and the streets looked bright and gay. [illegible] [illegible] from thousands of flags which floated from business houses and buildings. The prospects of a bad day did not interfere with visitors from the country. Every railroad train brought in thousands of spectators while the roads were crowded with vehicles of every description bearing hundreds of farmers and their families to the city. By 10 o'clock the streets began to fill up and by the time the various organizations formed in line an immense mass had collected on every corner and thousands lined the sidewalks and house tops and filled every window on the streets through which the line of march was to be taken. The afternoon was observed as a general holiday and with one accord the various institutions of industry banks and business houses closed doors in honor of the occasion and added hundreds of employes to the throngs of spectators. The workingmen formed a large part of those who engaged in the procession and among them were many who had fought under the great chieftain. At 2 15 P M an artillery salute fired by a detachment of artillery from Ft Omaha stationed on the hill near St Joseph's hospital announced the approach of the train having on board Gen Grant and party. In an instant afterwards the various church and fire bells all over the city began ringing chimes and steam whistles of all the manufactories and locomotives rent the air with shrill shrieks and everybody shouted and cheered and on every hand the wildest enthusiasm prevailed. The immense crowd assembled at the Union Pacific depot were on tip toe of expectation from the time of the firing of the signal salute until the train pulled into the depot. The train consisted of the engine and four cars baggage car passenger coach and two Pullman sleepers. The engine was elegantly decorated with flags and bunting. General Grant and party occupied one of the Pullman sleepers the Omaha escort of the Grand Army of the Republic occupied the other. This escort met the general at Cheyenne yesterday having left Omaha on Thursday for that purpose. After leaving Pine Bluffs General Grant visited the escort in the car and were introduced in a neat speech by General M Anderson and stayed an hour. Conversation and singing filled the time. After supper at Sidney a camp fire was held in the sleeper. Speeches were made by everybody and a long one by Gen Grant. At Grand Island breakfast was had this morning at 7 o'clock and the party was increased by a delegation of state officers and prominent citizens of Omaha who left here last evening. At every station along the line enthusiastic demonstrations were made by immense crowds which assembled to greet America's most distinguished citizen. It was a grand welcome all along the line terminating at Omaha this evening in the greatest ovation ever witnessed here. A few minutes after the firing of the signal salute, the train pulled into the Union Pacific depot amid the firing of cannon, ringing of bells, shrieking of steam whistles and shouts of a vast multitude who shouted themselves hoarse. It was a noisy enthusiastic reception and the crowd of thousands upon thousands went wild with excitement and delight in their welcome to the returning traveler. The various brass bands played several patriotic airs during the interval of waiting and while various organizations were being formed into line on Tenth street by grand marshals. As soon as Gen Grant entered a carriage in company with Gen Crook, Gov Nance and Mayor Chase the column took up the line of march through the principal streets to the capitol where a platform had been erected on the high school grounds. Here Gov Nance made a brief speech of welcome followed by Mayor Chase who introduced Gen Grant amid enthusiastic applause. Gen Grant spoke for about five minutes saying he was glad to put foot once more upon American soil after such long absence. He had been cordially received everywhere as the representative of the American people who are appreciated by foreign nations more than we appreciate ourselves. Upon the conclusion of his remarks the procession reformed and marched to Farnham street where Gen Grant reviewed the regular troops state militia fire companies civic societies etc. A handshaking reception took place at the United States court house and post office building. The day concluded with a grand banquet at the Withnell House. Gen Grant and wife remain here over Sunday the guests of Gen Crook and wife at Ft Omaha. They will attend services to morrow at the first M E church

The Banquet

OMAHA Nov [illegible]—A banquet was tendered Gen Grant last evening by citizens about sixty invited guests being present. After dinner speeches were made by the general and Senator Saunders and Hitchcock. The general was quite witty. His tongue seems to have become loosened in Nebraska as he made speeches at every stopping place after striking the border line. An hour's reception was held and then Gen Grant and wife with Mr and Mrs Crook drove to the military headquarters at Fort Omaha where they remained all night. The weather has been unfavorable dusty and cold

SPECIAL REPORT FOR THE OREGONIAN

OLYMPIA Oct 31 1879

Another beautiful day, but with little to chronicle regarding its doings. The council adjourned at an early hour. In the house H B 2 occupied most of the afternoon. This bill provides for the descent of real estate and personal property the law regarding which is very defective in our territory. But after an animated debate members not liking the provisions of the present substitute voted it down

A strong effort will in all likelihood be made during the present session to change some of the school text books adopted by our territorial board of education. The books referred to are the Independent Readers, Davies & Peck's Arithmetics Monteith's Geographies and Barnes United States History. These books are complained of most bitterly by parents and teachers and especially is this so in regard to the Independent Readers. It is claimed that they not only contain many glaring errors and are most unsatisfactory in method but that they are also much higher in price. It is also said that they were inaugurated by jobbery and serious evil is resulting from their retention. The legislature is looked to as a means of redress

MONDAY MORNING, NOV 3 1879.

DEATH OF GEN. HOOKER.

About ten years ago Gen. Hooker retired from active service in the army, upon the full rank of major general. Since then his name has appeared only occasionally before the public. To those who have given attention to such reports as have been published concerning him, it has been known that infirmities have been growing upon him for some years, and therefore they will not now be surprised to hear of his death. He had almost completed his sixty-fifth year.

Joseph Hooker was born at Hadley, Mass., Nov. 13, 1814. At the age of nineteen he was sent to West Point, where he graduated in 1837. His first active service was in Florida, where he took part in the Seminole war. He served in Mexico throughout the war with that country, and was brevetted for gallantry in several actions. In 1851 he was sent to California. In 1853 he resigned from the army and engaged in farming in that state. During his stay on this coast he was much in Oregon, and is remembered by many as superintendent of military roads here. When the war broke out in 1861 he tendered his services to the government and was appointed brigadier general. In March, 1862, he was assigned to the command of a division in the third corps of the army of the Potomac, and took a very prominent part in the battles of McClellan's peninsula campaign. Promoted to the rank of major general of volunteers and continuing in command of a division, he was engaged in the battles of Manassas and Chantilly, and a short time afterwards in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, at the latter of which he was severely wounded. Two months later, on his recovery so that he could take the field, he was assigned to the command of the second grand division of the army of the Potomac, consisting of the 3d and 5th corps, and held this command at the battle of Fredricksburg, Dec. 13, 1862. In January, 1863, he succeeded Burnside in the command of the army of the Potomac, and in May following fought the battle of Chancellorsville, where he failed, though much outnumbering the enemy.

At the time of the invasion of Pennsylvania by Gen. Lee the army of the Potomac under Hooker covered Washington and Baltimore and followed Lee to the vicinity of Frederick, Md., when, owing to the refusal of Gen. Halleck to place the troops at Harper's Ferry at the disposal of Hooker, the latter requested to be relieved of the command, to which Meade succeeded. In September, 1863, he was again in active service, having been assigned to the command of the 20th corps, operating in Tennessee. Again he distinguished himself, fighting with his usual spirit at Lookout and Missionary Ridge, and leading his corps in the almost constant fighting up to Atlanta. A question of command having then arisen, he was relieved at his own request, and did not thereafter engage in active service.

Gen. Hooker made a reputation as an impetuous fighter rather than as an able commander. While in command of the army of the Potomac his combinations were, indeed, ably made, but he failed at the point of execution, which seemed the result of a sense of responsibility which he was not fitted to bear. Under McClellan, Grant and Sherman he always did well, and his constant readiness and inclination for a fight became proverbial. But when he had an individual command with sole responsibility he seemed unequal to it, and became excessively cautious as McClellan was under all conditions.

In the Atlantic for the present month there is an article on "Our Military Past and Future" which discusses Hooker at Chancellorsville in these terms: "When we read of 120,000 Americans under Hooker recoiling before 70,000 Americans under Lee, we cannot at first tell what to make of it. We suspect, perhaps, that the 120,000 were not brave as the 70,000. There is little sense in that supposition, as applied to the period in question. The army of the Potomac at Chancellorsville was depressed by repeated failures, while the army of Virginia was confident through repeated successes. But that was not the only, nor indeed the principal, cause of this remarkable repulse. Hooker was only half-way an able commander. He had enough of strategy to make an excellent plan on paper, but he had not the moral force to carry it out in the face of unexpected aggressiveness. He knew perfectly well that two men would be likely to beat one, but he neglected the other grand principle, that they should do it promptly. The skill he showed in crossing the Rappahannock and getting upon the left flank of Lee was admirable. Displaying three corps in front of Fredericksburg and thus alluring the mass of the southern army to that point, he at the same time slipped four corps across the river some miles further north, and then quietly drew after him one of the corps which had amused Lee. So far all was perfect. He had turned the left wing of the confederates with a great army; he had only to advance and crush them between himself and Sedgwick, who was now seizing Fredericksburg. But the moment Lee wheeled upon him he lost courage and retreated. He saw Jackson move around his right, and did not attack his extended column of march—a thing which Napoleon would have been almost certain to do, and no doubt with splendid success. After enduring several assaults in front and rear, after suffering himself to be in a manner besieged by an inferior enemy, he retired across the Rappahannock. At least one third of his numerous and fine army had not fired a musket. He had brought upon the field a far larger force than his antagonist, and then had used but a part of it, and that only in self defense. Lee, who was to have been overwhelmed by numbers and enterprise, was allowed to recover the offensive, and to turn his whole power first upon Hooker and then upon Sedgwick. A novice in the science of war can see that what ruined the campaign of Chancellorsville was inattention to the Napoleonic principle that 'a force must act with the greatest possible velocity.' It was this same lack of energy and speed which spoiled the plan of McDowell at Bull Run, and of Burnside at Fredericksburg, and which made McClellan but half way a great general."

Hooker in his best days was a vivacious man, fond of companionship, a good talker, with unusual suavity of manner and power of making himself agreeable to those with whom he came in contact. After he resigned his position in the army in 1853 he was often in reduced circumstances. It was this which brought him to Oregon to superintend the construction of roads. He did his work well, for which Southern Oregon has always remembered him. He was present at Salem in 1860 when Nesmith and Baker were elected to the senate, and for the assistance he rendered on that occasion he was remembered by both—a circumstance which perhaps did much to advance his fortunes in the army at the beginning of the war. The last time he was in Oregon was in 1872, when he came as a visitor for the recreation of travel. Many will remember his conversations at that time, in which he expressed himself with vehemence and bitterness against Grant, who was then a candidate for his second presidential term.

Senator Chandler was chairman of the republican national committee. It is probable that the committee will soon meet to take proper action in respect to his memory, and also to elect a successor to the chairmanship. This last will be necessary in view of the approaching national contest.

ZACHARIAH CHANDLER.

Though Senator Chandler of Michigan, whose death is announced, was never among the great leaders of the thought of the country, he has for many years been distinguished among those who have been looked to as embodying the earnestness, patriotism and fearlessness of the great masses who have carried the country triumphantly through a most stormy and dangerous period. His death, therefore, is an event which attracts universal notice and calls forth very general expressions of regret. Zachariah Chandler was born at Bedford, N. H., Dec. 10, 1813. Like so many of New England's earnest and adventurous young men, he went west at an early age, and pushing into business became a highly successful merchant. In 1857, when the national conscience was just becoming thoroughly awakened on the subject of slavery, he was elected to the United States senate. The people of Michigan knew him for force of character, for fidelity to the growing conviction of the north that the time had come to resist the aggressions of the slave power, and for a most vigorous and unquailing courage. The times demanded such men, and in him his constituents proved that they were not mistaken. He was one of the strong pillars of the administration of Lincoln during the war. In the political struggles which preceded the war he was one of the few undaunted men who braved the insolence of the secessionists, defied their power, and foretold their overthrow. Among the first to divine their purposes, he told the country that they meant rebellion and the disruption of the union. He was not an orator, and yet his speeches were characterized by an extraordinary directness, fearlessness and force. There was not in his manner anything of the courtly suavity of Seward, nor in his style anything of the stately and lofty declamation of Sumner. He and Ben Wade, for many years contemporaries in the senate, much resembled each other in certain points of manner and character. Both possessed remarkable boldness, and both had an incisive plainness of speech that expressed in a few words all there was to be said on a subject. While Seward and Sumner would deliver set speeches, which they had wrought into most elaborate orations, setting forth to the country the irrepressible conflict and the aims of the slave power, Chandler and Wade, in occasional speeches of a dozen lines, interjected here and there in the course of the extended debates of the time, would send their shafts right to the marrow of the subject, disconcerting political opponents and furnishing political friends with texts and tests by which to judge the movements and tendencies of the rising conflict. Chandler became intensely hated by political opponents, solely on account of his uncompromising hostility to confederate-democratic schemes and the courageous manner in which he denounced them. Hence for many years he has been most bitterly assailed by every degree of political opposition. In time it came to be thought by a class of persons in his own party that his "stalwartism" was extreme. So in 1874 they combined with the democrats to prevent his re-election to the senate, and succeeded. But the man who had been chosen in his place (Mr. Christiancy) did not serve out his term. When President Hayes came into office Christiancy resigned the senatorship and accepted a mission to a South American state. Meantime the people of Michigan had begun to realize that Chandler was, after all, the man whom they wanted in the senate. After his retirement from that body in 1875 President Grant had made him secretary of the interior, the duties of which he discharged in so efficient a manner as to disarm the criticism which attended his appointment to the office. After the expiration of his term in this position the people of his state gladly seized the opportunity to send him back to the senate to fill the place vacated by Christiancy's resignation. He was just the man to encounter the returned brigadiers in the senate. His famous speech of ten minutes last winter, in reply to those who were defending the rebellion and praising the patriotism of the principal actors in it, dumfounded the southern senators and their northern allies and rendered it impossible even to attempt a reply. Chandler had qualities which rendered him a most useful man in a crisis like that through which the country has passed while he has been in political life. There can be no doubt that he would have been re-elected to the senate had he lived. He was, undeniably, an exponent of the stalwart republican sentiment of Michigan and, though no man is ever essential to a great cause, it will not be easy for Michigan at this time to supply his place.

President Buchanan, in his last annual message, declared that the constitution did not delegate to congress or to the executive power to coerce or to prevent the secession of a state. His policy was strictly in accord with this position. Black, his attorney general, published an opinion which affirmed the same thing. All know how this false doctrine gave encouragement to secession. The people of the seceding states were virtually told by the executive to go ahead with their plans and purposes, since the government had no rightful power to restrain them. All this is very familiar to the country. But what is new and amazing is the fact that this position had the support of Edwin M. Stanton. In a letter to Mr. Buchanan, dated April 3, 1861, he said: "The first month of the Lincoln administration seems to have furnished ample vindication of your policy, and to have rendered all occasion of other defense needless." And yet Buchanan's policy had been one of direct encouragement to the rebellion, which organized without objection from him and had his official declaration that the government had no power to resist it. Better for Stanton's fame that these letters had lain in oblivion.

It is learned from the St. Paul Pioneer Press that the contract for grading the intervening stretch of line between the Little Missouri river and the terminus of the one hundred miles now being built west of Bismarck, D. T., has been let to Walker, Bellows & Co., the contractors of the latter work. This will add from 110 to 140 miles—according to the point struck on the Little Missouri—to the western extension of the Northern Pacific, and the grading is to be completed by the 1st of next September. Thirty miles of the grading of the Casselton branch will be finished this fall, and will be ironed early next spring, and in time for the transportation of next year's crop.

Mr. Tom Hendricks has invented a new way of dodging that everlasting question about the second place on the democratic ticket. At the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, Mr. Blackburn asked him: "Mr. Hendricks would you accept the second position on the ticket under certain circumstances?" His wife immediately answered for him, "Under no circumstances!"

For some time past the United States has been without ambassadors at St. Petersburg and London, and without perceptible detriment to the country. Some prominent journals are recommending that the foreign missions be abolished as obsolete institutions which have been supplanted by fast mails and the telegraph.

FOR HONORABLE DEALING.

The contemptible squibs and puffs that Mr. Abell is inserting from time to time in the papers, if properly recognized as his own, are beneath notice. Any man has the right to advertise his business, but when he uses newspaper reporters, and causes them to assail me by name, and tries to use these papers to injure my business by misleading the public, it is due that public and just to myself that I give a "plain, unvarnished tale," cut where it may. Frank Abell does not dare to ask me why I have the blue ribbon on my pictures, but hiding his cowardly head behind a reporter, gets him to suggest the inquiry which I will proceed to answer. In doing so, I will also answer the oft-repeated question as to "why Buchtel, the acknowledged leading photographer of Oregon, made no exhibit at the State Fair of 1879."

In 1878 Buchtel & Stolte (it is well known that Mr. Stolte was then in partnership with me,) and Mr. Abell were competitors for premiums at the State Fair. Hundreds of visitors, including some of the best artists and art critics, made comparisons of the exhibits, and in nearly all instances were not biased by personal considerations, the award was in favor of the Buchtel & Stolte exhibit. And at the close of the fair this public award was sustained by the committee as witness the following telegrams:

PORTLAND, Oct. 22, 1878.

Jas. Walton, Salem, Oregon: Who got first premium for best photographs? Answer by telegraph.

BUCHTEL & STOLTE.

SALEM, Oct. 22, 1878.

Buchtel & Stolte, Portland, Oregon: The first premium was given to you for best photographs.

JAMES WALTON,
Supt. of Division and Chairman of Committee.

About the same time the undersigned and the public generally were astonished to find Abell claiming the premium. How this was brought about has never been made clear, but the matter will be fully investigated and exposed if Mr. Abell desires it. Meanwhile the following extract from a letter to me may throw some light upon this matter. It is written by Hon. E. M. Waite, the secretary of the State Agricultural Society, dated Salem, Jan. 10, 1879, and bears the seal of the society:

"Mr. Abell came to me and asked where he could enter some photographs for which no premium was offered. I told him in division V, and I suppose he had them entered as he was standing at the desk with the clerk for some time, but he ought to have known that only in two or three cases, which are specified, could he enter an article more than once. After the committee had passed an examination, he came to me in a high state of excitement in regard to the awards made. I told him I had nothing to do about it. But, said I, 'Mr. Abell, from what the committee have told me, you would have done better if you had been frank and straightforward with them. They tell me that you acknowledged to a false statement, and that prejudiced all else you had to say.' He came near crying and then told me that he had made a statement untruthful, and that he knew it had prejudiced them against him and he wished he had not done it."

Why should Abell be "in a high state of excitement in regard to the awards made" if, as he claims, they were given to him? Why was it that "he came near crying?" (Mr. Walton, chairman of the committee, says he did cry.) And why is it that after the detection and exposure of his fraud and imposition upon the committee and the society, and this pitiable exhibition of the poor boy crying over his humiliating plight in the presence of the officers of the society, he flaunts the blue ribbon and claims the award? The fullest measure of satisfaction has been promised to me by the officers of the society, though not yet furnished, but will be. And until this is done every honorable person in the state will now understand why I will not enter into competition at our state fair with a man who has no sense of honor, who will descend so low as to cheat and lie about his exhibit, and who will put in work as his own which he never did and never can do, who will enter his goods for a first premium in one class, and failing there will, contrary to the laws of the society, smuggle the same articles into another division to be passed upon by another committee.

I invite and welcome honorable business competition. I am not afraid to compare my work with that of any living artist. But I want the public to understand that I do not regard Abell as such a competitor.

Until the state fair crookedness shall be straightened out, I cannot enter my work there. But I took great pleasure in trying to do my part in my contribution to the Mechanics' Fair that has just closed its remarkably successful exhibit. How well I have succeeded a discriminating public can attest. I can say that all the work claimed by me in my exhibit is my own. Some of the coloring of my exhibit can not be done here, and I have taken pains to so inform the public and award the credit where due. I did not try to make a show of gilt picture frames, oil and water coloring and crayons not done in my own gallery, but to give the best samples of my own real, every day work. As in the case of the state fair in 1878, the people have made their award and I am perfectly satisfied with the uniform testimony to the superiority of my exhibit.

The public will understand that I have not desired to bring out these unpleasant facts when I state that I have been in possession of them for over a year, but I have been compelled to do so by the constant attacks covertly made upon me at the instigation of Mr. Abell. JOS. BUCHTEL.

WEATHER PROBABILITIES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

WASHINGTON, Nov 3.—12:35 A. M.—For Pacific coast, generally clear weather.

CITY.

THE DAYTON FLOURING MILLS BURNED.—Saturday morning, about 8 o'clock, a fire broke out in the Dayton flouring mills at Dayton, Yamhill county, and entirely consumed that structure and contents, excepting six tons of flour and feed. The fire caught in the eaves from sparks from the smoke stack. The City of Quincy, which had just left Dayton for this city, being signaled, returned to the dock back of Powell's warehouse. Attaching the boat's hose with some on shore to the donkey water was thrown on the warehouse and it was saved from destruction. They also saved Miller's warehouse, which would probably have been burned but for their timely assistance. Captain Buchanan and men deserve much praise for their well-directed efforts. The mill was owned by Mrs. J. B. Harker and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Van Rensaler, and had been leased to Mr. Thos. Standley, the occupant at the time of the fire. Mr. Standley was insured for $2000, which will cover about half his loss. It is reported that Mrs. Harker has an insurance of $2500 on her interest in the building, and that the Van Rensalears are uninsured. The mill was run by steam and water power and was valued at $15,000.

AN INTERESTING CASE.—Saturday a case was argued before Judge Bellinger, in which the several militia companies of the city feel special interest. Some time ago Judge Rice refused to allow the claim of the Portland Light Battery for the amount due that organization under the law. Prior to July the county court had been allowing each of the militia companies $50 per month. Since that time the court has declined to pay the sum, and has only been willing to allow the battery $10 per month. The matter came up in the shape of a writ of review to inquire into the right of the county court to disallow the claim. The county is represented by Hon. J. F. Caples, district attorney, and the Portland Light Battery and State by Mr. Fred V. Holman, who is Judge Advocate of Gov. Thayer's staff. Mr. Caples filed a motion Saturday to dismiss the writ of review alleging that it was not the proper way to reach the question, which matter was argued and taken under advisement by Judge Bellinger.

THE ELLIOTT SWINDLE.—For the benefit of the reporter of the Standard, who makes objections to our corrections of the errors into which he fell while giving an alleged account of the swindle perpetrated by Elliott on the Northwestern Life Insurance Company, we only state that our information was derived solely from Mr. N. W. Garretson, agent of the company. Not a particle of information furnished by the Standard or its reporter was used in the article. For our information we went to the only authoritative source, and there got it. We had long been in possession of a good many of the facts, but at request of parties interested had refrained from using them. Since the Standard itself is in all respects the organ of "professional discourtesy," getting five-sixths of its news from THE OREGONIAN and never giving credit therefor, it was hardly worth while for it to get up a show of pinchbeck indignation over this matter.

MONGOLIAN MURDERED.—One of the prominent Chinese firms of Second street received a letter Saturday from Salem, containing information of the murder of a Celestial near Silverton, in Marion county, Friday evening. From the particulars which were obtained from a police officer it seems that three Celestials occupied a small den, and two of the party became involved in a dispute over the affairs of the concern. One of the twain becoming angered at something his partner had said, picked up a heavy ax and striking his controversial chum a heavy blow cleft his head open. The murdered man expired without a groan. The only witness of the crime, in addition to the principal, is also held responsible for the deed. The murderer's name is Ah Lin. No arrests have been made at last accounts.

TRACK MOVING.—A few days ago the O. C. R. R. track, on Fourth street, from A street to the Couch lake bridge, a distance of eight or ten blocks, was moved from its position in the middle of the street to near the sidewalk that the work of repairing now going on might be made complete. That work having been accomplished, the track was moved back to its original place on Saturday afternoon. The task, a very considerable one, was done by main strength. A party of about one hundred and fifty Chinamen were ranged along the track, and at signals from a superintendent, heaved altogether with crowbars, at each effort shoving the track a few inches, until it rested again in the middle of the street.

ANNUAL CO-OPERATION OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.—The annual co-operative meeting of the Christian Church takes place at Monmouth, in Polk county, this week, commencing Tuesday afternoon, the 4th, and ending the Thursday evening following. By arrangement with the Oregon & California and Western Oregon Railroad Companies, all persons attending this meeting upon paying full fare one way will be returned free over the roads of these companies upon presentation of the certificate of the secretary, Hon. A. V. Locke, certifying their attendance at the meeting.

FROM ASTORIA.—The following specials have been received at the Merchants' Exchange: Nov. 1st., City of Madras got off at high tide, no damage; Ravenscrag and Spirit of the Dawn crossed out this morning. 4 P. M., clear and warm; no vessels up. 6 P. M., Rosedale Castle arrived here at 5:30 P. M. Nov. 2, 6 P. M., Isle of Bute arrived from Portland in tow of the Willamette Chief at 3 P. M.; the ships Loch Cree and Beemah arrived this evening; San Luis and City of Madras crossed out this morning.

BURIED.—The remains of the late Isaac Rennison were buried on yesterday afternoon at Powell's Valley cemetery. A large number of his friends and neighbors were in attendance. Rev. J. Exon officiated and read the impressive burial service of the Methodist church of which the deceased was a member. Hon. J. F. Caples, district attorney, pronounced a brief, eloquent and merited eulogy upon the life and character of the deceased.

INSANE PATIENTS.—Deputy Sheriff T. B. Hill, of Umatilla, arrived here Saturday evening, having in charge three insane persons. Two of the patients are white men and the third a Chinaman. The names of the former are Peter Smith and Thos. Fisher. The name of the Mongolian is not known. The patients were committed to the asylum.

THE WALKING MATCH.—As will be seen by advertisement, found elsewhere, the walking match will commence at Turn Halle next Saturday. The female walkists who will take part in the match will be Miss Alice Donley, Miss Lillie Denman, Miss Belle Brannan and Miss Sadie Donley. Full particulars will be found in another column.

DEATH OF MR. RENNISON.—One of the grand jurors, Mr. Isaac Rennison, who has been complaining for several days, died at the residence of Mr. Henry Prettyman, near East Portland, Saturday. The remains were conveyed to Powell's valley, where the deceased has long resided, and the funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

THE NEW DAM.—During the present fine weather the work on the new dam which is being constructed at the head of the Willamette slough by Messrs Smith and Parquet, is being crowded forward vigorously. The contractors expect to complete the work in the course of ten days.

STILL ALARM.—About a quarter to six last evening a flue of a building which stands at the corner of First and Salmon streets burned out. No alarm of fire was sounded, but the various companies came out. There was no occasion for calling the fire companies into requisition.

COMING OUT AGAIN.—The Aberystwith Castle, Captain Harris, which rendered such valuable assistance to the Pilgrim, leaving two years ago, and which called for a testimonial from the Astoria chamber of commerce, is again on the way to this port.

BUSINESS LIVELY.—Merchants inform us that the retail business has not been so lively for a year past as it has been within the past three weeks. This is an encouraging indication of business revival.

DANGEROUSLY ILL.—The friends of Mr Thomas Holton will learn with regret that he is now lying very dangerously ill. Last evening but slender hopes of his recovery were entertained.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

DEDICATION OF THEIR NEW HALL SATURDAY NIGHT.

Address by President R. K. Warren—Short Speeches by Reverends Acton, Eliot, Banks, Stubbs, Hon. J. F. Caples and Capt. M. C. Wilkinson.

Saturday evening the new Y. M. C. A. hall was filled with an intelligent audience, the occasion being the dedication of the new quarters to the work of the association. The Oregon Temperance society joined in the exercises, and the platform was occupied by the two presidents, Prof. R. K. Warren and Hon. J. F. Caples. The various speakers occupied seats in the audience, and came forward as called upon. Mr. Wm. H. Wadhams beamed upon the assembly from his usual place, being flanked by a long row of singers, a flute and two organs. Promptly at the appointed time singing began, and was heartily participated in, as the music at these rooms always is. After the opening devotional exercises by Dr. Atkinson Prof. Warren said:

PRESIDENT WARREN'S ADDRESS.

Brethren and Friends:—Welcome to night to our new rooms. The old, hallowed by precious memories of the past, has given place to the new, and in the name of the association and of the board of managers, I repeat "Welcome, and thrice welcome." We salute and greet you, Mr President and representatives of the temperance organization, pledging yourselves as we know you here do, shoulder to shoulder to do gallant work against the common enemy of souls. This meeting is a twin gathering for a noble cause. It is fitting that the two organizations should thus meet for the purpose of dedicating these rooms to the noblest, grandest work under the sun.

Our city has been the scene of unusual excitement during the past few weeks. Our citizens have been liberal and enthusiastic to a degree seldom before witnessed in doing honor to "the nation's guest." This is well. We are proud thus to honor so grand a representative of our "American Ideas." Ideas have power. Our nation is the product of a thought. Again we point with pride to the new pavilion as the result of an idea warmed into life. We see in its erection, at a cost of nearly $15,000 the enterprise manifested by some of our leading business men. That this enterprise was appreciated is evident from the throngs who daily and nightly assembled. The exhibitors vied with each other in displaying their various articles so that they would appear to the best advantage, thus showing that they realized the benefits to be derived from this method of advertising. There is a benefit to the community beyond all this. It harmonizes. It unites. It makes people think, feel and act alike, and thus derive pleasure from each others' society.

And yet, these various occasions of enthusiasm and objects of interest are of little value or importance in comparison to the interests for which we are here assembled. Those are temporal, these eternal. We are here in token of the Christian faith. We are inspired by that faith, and act with confidence in the belief that this world is to be brought under the reign of our Lord and Saviour. That it is to be brought about through the instrumentality of active Christian effort; that it is to be done according to a plan formed from all eternity, and that this plan centers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

"God sent His Son into the world that the world might through Him be saved."

For this cause God made the world to set up a kingdom here that should break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms, and which should stand forever. And so primarily God established the Christian church and made it her business to hold up God's truth to the world. It is her business to adapt Christian effort to the peculiar wants of each community. You cannot preach a community inside of the churches. It never has been done; it never will be done. Then the question arises, How best to preach to those whom the churches cannot otherwise induce to come to hear the gospel, who will not hear the word from the pulpit?

The Young Men's Christian Association is one means employed in answer to the question.

It has then a peculiar mission. It is not a church, but it is a great Christian tree, with its roots in the various churches. I have said that the Y. M. C. A. has a mission. If it has not it ought not to exist.

When we found out that we must give up our rooms at the corner of Alder street, it was with many misgivings for the future, involving as we knew it would a large outlay, even if we could get another suitable place. God pointed us to this place; but those who did not see it as it was one month ago, cannot realize in the slightest degree the amount of labor necessary to adapt it to our work.

Increased rent also stared us in the face. In addition to an outlay of over $900 in fitting up the rooms, we must meet an expense of at least $150 per month. Many of our members hesitated, some doubted, and others said "we cannot meet the expense." But a few, bold in the faith—and it is but just to mention Mr. Wm. Wadhams, as one of the most active and determined—placed it on a square basis, viz: "On First street we have a mission; on any other, at present, we have none." And so the words seemed to ring out clear and plain, "Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

These cheerful rooms right in the midst of a sea of sin—the very breakers dashing with angry roar on every side of us. These rooms speak to night of the Christain's faith in God's promises. And now are we appalled at the work God is setting before us? This room means work. It means sacrifice. It means "money wanted." But after all what a pittance it will be if we all give in proportion to blessings received. We are not going to take up a collection, but you will all, very soon, have an opportunity to test your faith in this matter. I am not in the habit of estimating audiences by the money standard, but I believe I can read in your countenances to-night a cheerful readiness to respond when called upon.

Ah! look at Satan's dazzling lights through painted windows and screens. Listen to the music and laughter of wrecked lives and characters within, and then say you will not come forward and help to throw around young men—strangers many—such safe guards as shall make their lives happier and better by offering free of cost some attractions to counteract these evil influences.

I must not dwell upon this point. It is not necessary, but I trust that your hearts are strong with resolution, and that we shall all this night give ourselves anew to God. We want here God's light. We want God's heart. We need to have our entire life controlled by the spirit of the living God. And I pray that when Dr. Lindsley leads us in the prayer of dedication by which this room is consecrated to Him who dwells in the heavens, I pray that every heart may join fervently in the petition for a present personal divine blessing. God grant that from this room there may go out as the months and years roll on, parents who shall be more faithful to their children, who shall do more to make home a place of intellectual and religious power,—that young men and women may here be aroused to purer and nobler purposes, and by laboring here in this grand field of Christian effort —make their mark for time and for eternity in the interest of the Christian faith.

We send forth from these halls the proclamation, "Young men wanted" to labor for Christ.

"The world wants men, large hearted manly men,
Men who shall join its chorus and prolong
The psalm of labor and the psalm of love.
The age wants heroes, heroes who shall dare
To struggle in the solid ranks of truth;
To clutch the monster error by the throat;
To bear opinion to a loftier seat;
To blot the era of oppression out
And lead a universal freedom in.
And heaven wants souls, fresh and capacious souls,
To taste its raptures, and expand like flowers.
Beneath the glory of its central sun;
It wants fresh souls—not lean and shriveled ones;
It wants fresh souls, my brother, give it thine,
If thou, indeed, wilt act as men should act,
Thou wilt be a hero, and wilt strive
To help thy fellow and exalt thyself,
Thy feet, at last, shall stand on jasper floors;
Thy heart, at last, shall seem a thousand hearts—
Each single heart with myriad raptures filled,
While thou shalt sit with princes and with kings,
Rich in the jewel of a ransomed soul."

I take this fitting opportunity to state, publicly, my position on the subject of temperance. It is a matter upon which we cannot afford to be divided. There is nothing to day, dear friends, that breeds so much vice, misery and ruin in this God given land as this monster evil of intemperance. I stand here to night to proclaim it to the four winds that if there is one thing on earth I would like to see done, so as to eradicate the evils by which our homes, our children, and our social system are surrounded, it is to see a law passed that neither making, handling, buying, selling, importing nor exporting of intoxicating liquors shall be allowed in this free country of ours. But the great point for our consideration is not what we shall do to get men to quit drinking, to sign the pledge, and to take a stand for sobriety, but what shall be done to hold them firmly after that step has been taken. That seems to me to be the paramount question. We must act in harmony if we would succeed. Time is too short and the interests at stake are too great to be hesitating within ourselves

The enemy we fight is more deadly than the blighting influence of the Upas tree, an enemy that brings madness, ruin, misery and death; breaks the family ties, turns the man into a brute, sends him to jail if not to the scaffold, destroys his influence for time, debars him from an existence in an eternity of happiness. I believe the only power that can save men from such degradation is the moral influence of Christianity. The temperance cause is grand and right, but its chief value is to lift up reason so that you can reach it, to remove the rubbish from the life so that the living truth of Christ can approach it. The chief value in making a man sober is, that you may get at his attention, get at his heart, get at his life, and get him in your arms. Let us not make a mistake. Do not tell me that a man can covenant not to drink, but reserve the right to adhere to every old indulgence, every other form of vice until his soul be rotten and disintegrating with sin, and make a complete reform simply because he does not commit this one sin. He must build strong entrenchments at every point of danger. How is he to do it? Let him remember the Master's struggle with the power of physical desire after forty days fasting and listening with a Christian's attention, [illegible] to him the calm suggestion of the spirit in the conflict with the weakness of the flesh. How these calm words speak of peace and obedience in the [illegible]

[illegible]

Prof. Warren then called on Hon. J. F. Caples, who gave an earnest [illegible] gratulation. He said as the [illegible] honest mechanic or the hardy [illegible] son of toil [illegible] extends [illegible] Mr. President, extend [illegible] [illegible] President Warren, who rose to meet him the two officers cordially shook hands, amid the applause of the audience.

After music, Dr. A. L. Lindsley offered the prayer of dedication which was earnest, solemn, and impressive and well fitting the occasion.

Rev. J. H. Acton said he was glad to be present; was on the side of right of temperance, of the association and of all influences calculated to elevate and benefit mankind. God bless and prosper the good work of both societies.

Rev. T. L. Eliot gave a good miniature model sermon, suggested by Paul's reasoning "of righteousness, of temperance, and judgment to come." He wasn't sure whether temperance was one link of a chain or the keystone of an arch, but he was sure that these three words might be carefully considered and borne in mind every one with advantage. He was heartily in accord with the efforts of the organizations represented, and believed that much good was being done by them.

Rev. L. A. Banks, a vigorous young man and a comparative stranger, rather liked the differences of church doctrines. Different denominations reach different classes of people, and all are suited. Standing once upon a lofty mountain, he saw several rivers each winding its crooked course through the distant country and seeming to bear no relation to its fellows; but all finally pouring their waters into the great Columbia, and losing their identity in the infinite expanse of waters. So the Christian denominations, going by different routes, will all land in heaven, and lose their individuality in the presence of their common Creator.

Capt. M. C. Wilkinson spoke a few moments with his usual energy and earnestness. He recognized the doors of the room as having been brought from the other hall. Every square foot of that old room seemed hallowed by some special providence to waiting souls. Many persons having referred with emotion to particular spots where they accepted the offer of salvation [illegible] of the most earnest and [illegible] workers that ever lived. He and all the speakers occupied but a few moments each, and the rapidity of the exercises was quite refreshing.

Chaplain R. S. Stubbs gave one of his happy little impromptu speeches. He is very effective in this kind of work. Some people need pathos and solemnity, and others something just the opposite to get the best results. A company of sailors pumping the water from a leaking ship, and almost ready to give up, were annoyed by the continual laughing of one of the cabin boys. At length in exasperation they demanded to know the cause of his mirth. Pointing to a dram drinker with a nose like a red peony, he said: "I am laughing to think how that man's nose will sizzle when we go down." The laugh which followed gave them encouragement, they renewed their efforts and were finally saved.

Rev. J. A. Cruzan intended to be present, but was prevented at the last moment. All who have heard his many earnest words at the Y. M. C. A. meetings know the ground he occupies.

The new hall is very pleasant. A new carpet, pronounced by the ladies to be beautiful, gives a homelike air, much to be desired. The platform is against the side wall so that the faces of the speakers are more plainly visible to the hearers. A separate committee room, reading room, and wood room render the place much more convenient than the old one. No more pleasant hall for social gatherings can be found in the city. Everybody is welcome, and young men are especially invited to the rooms and to the meetings.

Y. M. H. A. ENTERTAINMENT.

The first entertainment for the season of 1879-80 by the Young Men's Hebrew Association, was given last night at the Conservatory of Music. The hall was uncomfortably crowded with an intelligent, well dressed audience. The exercises opened with a piano solo, "Polka Militaire," by Prof. J. H. Brenner, which was played with his well known grace and elegance, as was also his violin solo, a selection from "Barber of Seville." Both were enthusiastically applauded and encored. A reading from Julius Cæsar by Mr. Ferd. Metzger, and the recitations, "The Black Horse and his Rider," by Mr. I. Fleischner, and "La Traviata" by Mr. T. D. Marks, were well rendered and well received. Operatic selections on the piano by Mrs. A. DeFries was a decided treat, and showed to a good advantage that lady's superior accomplishments. Her performance was heartily encored, and was responded to with "Casta Diva." Mr. W. H. Kinross sang "Yeoman's Wedding Song," and in response to an encore gave "Nancy Lee." Both were up to his high standard. Miss Flora Abrams who has a splendid clear soprano voice, sang that exquisitely beautiful gem "Gute Nacht, du mein Herziges Kind," by Abt, with much feeling. In response to a well deserved encore, Miss Abrams repeated one verse in English. Decidedly the best part of the entertainment was an address by Mr. D. Solis Cohen, which was announced on the programme "Dust by the Riverside." It was a series of most beautiful descriptions, mixed with sad, dreamy thoughts of what the writer saw on the banks of Thames, the Avon and the Seine. As a literary effort the production is entitled to a prominent place in American literature, and as a piece of subdued oratory, to much praise. We hope that the gentlemen composing this association will soon give another of their charming entertainments.

There will be a stated meeting of Oregon Lodge of Perfection No. 1 to-morrow (Tuesday) evening at 7:30 o'clock, at Masonic Temple. The members are requested to be present, as important business will be considered.

PINAFORE.

Every preparation having been completed, H. M. S. Pinafore will be presented this evening at New Market theater. The piece has been very carefully rehearsed under the personal supervision of Mr. Fred Lyster and Prof. Kinross, and will doubtless be produced in a very excellent manner. The piece has been well set and will be presented with every attention to the detail of scenic and mechanical effect and costume. The chorus is composed of a number of amateur singers of local fame. The members of the chorus have been very thoroughly instructed, and there is every reason to predict they will be prompt and efficient. The same can with truth be said of the orchestra. The principal characters have been entrusted to very competent hands. The following is the cast: "Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., Mr. Fred Lyster; "Captain Corcoran" Mr. Kinross; "Ralph Rackstraw," Mr. Dowd; "Dick Deadeye," Mr. Lownsdale; "Boatswain" Mr. Allen; "Boatswain's Mate," Mr. Atkinson; "The Midship Mite," Little Dot; "Josephine, the Captain's Daughter," Miss Lillian Andrews; "Cousin Hebe," Miss Clefden; "Little Buttercup," Mrs. Parrish; with their sisters, and their cousins, and their aunts. Miss Lillian Andrews, to whom is assigned the character of "Josephine," will appear to better advantage in the role of a light operatic singer than she has done heretofore in the drama. She has a remarkably sweet and flexible voice, sings brilliantly and acts with grace and ease. A large number of reserved seats have been taken, and a jammed house may be anticipated.

PERSONAL.

Mr. L. P. McCarty, compiler of the Annual Statistician for 1879, arrived on the steamer Oregon. He will leave for eastern Oregon in a few days. Mr. McCarty will not leave for San Francisco until the middle of December. The object of his visit is to dispose of his work and collect data for future publications.

SUCCESSFUL LAUNCH.

Previous notice that ferryboat No. 2 was to be launched on Saturday last brought large crowds of spectators to the banks of the Willamette. The representative of THE OREGONIAN was cordially received on board by superintendent J. Brandt, Jr., and shown through the engine room, etc.

The substantial, tasty and relatively powerful engine we were informed were built by Harlan & Hollingsworth of Wilmington, Delaware. The same firm built the iron hull of the ferryboat, which was transported overland to Portland. The engine has a 30 inch cylinder and 5-foot stroke. There are four pumps in the engine room, three are worked by steam. One has a pumping capacity of $10,000 gallons per minute. In an emergency this vessel could perform effective service on the river front in subduing fires.

The mechanics, under the direction of Mr. A. Brandt had done well their part. On every hand the work exhibited neatness and solidity. At the appointed hour, in obedience to a signal from the well known master builder, Mr. John Holland, blows from thirty or more ship carpenters, announced to all on shore and aboard, that the vessel was being released from the blocking and cradles, in less than fifteen minutes the shout was heard: "all ready." The gun was fired and all on board were thrilled with a peculiar sensation which became more exhilarating as the velocity of the vessel's motion increased. Shouts from hundreds of throats, screeching of steam whistles, waving of hats and handkerchiefs, proclaimed the launch in progress. A plunge, a careen or two, and we all knew the launch was a grand success.

Everything in the engine room being in readiness, at the word of command from Capt. C. Jones the vessel steamed ahead and proceeded on a short trial trip, her decks floating gaily in the bright autumnal sun, and the guests on board greatly delighted with her maiden effort on the beautiful Willamette. All admired her prompt obedience to the improvised helm and the readiness with which she turned in mid channel. When she receives the justly celebrated hydraulic steering apparatus of Mr. John Gates of this city, to operate both the rudders at the same time, she will probably turn in her own length. One marked improvement in this ferry boat is the convenient accommodations for passengers—a saloon on either side, one for ladies and one for gentlemen. These conveniences were much needed and will be welcomed by the traveling public.

The entire cost of the vessel is about $45,000. Her successful launch marks another step in the rapid growth of Portland. It is a practical demonstration of a desire to interpret and to meet the growing wants of the public by the capitalists who control so largely the development of our agricultural resources. The material of which she is built reminds us, in the midst of our exhaustless resources of wood, iron and coal, that the day of wooden ships is well nigh passed, and that the future ship building estimated of this great northwest must be based on iron and not wood. Why, with Oswego so near at hand, may not Portland-on-the-Willamette become the successful rival of Glasgow-on the Clyde in the matter of iron ship building.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR.

TWELFTH DAY.

Immense Attendance Afternoon and Evening—The Fair a Complete Success.

On Saturday evening an immense crowd gathered at the pavilion, it being estimated that not less than three thousand people were in attendance. All seemed to be as much interested as on any previous occasion, while the managers must have felt elated at the measure of success which had been attained. There had been some talk of keeping the exhibition open a few days longer, but the directors, with very good judgment decided not to let the fair wear the people out, but to close it while there was yet a large share of interest felt, so that with the inauguration of the next fair there might be no lingering memories of an occasion in which patience was worn and spare cash exhausted.

The pavilion was as brilliantly lighted, the band played as gaily, the exhibitors were as accommodating in showing visitors their wares, the musical instrument stands resounded with as many merry songs, as when the fair first opened. Nobody was out of patience, nobody was tired of the fair, but, as all things must have an end, so the directors concluded to close it upon [illegible] Accordingly a few seconds before that hour the bell struck, the whistles of the engines began to scream, the band struck up "Home, Sweet Home," and the crowd, accepting the signal, filed out and the pavilion was closed and the exhibition declared over until 1880, when the third fair of the Mechanical Industrial Association will be held. The enterprise has doubtless met the most sanguine expectation of the managers, and leaves no doubt in the public mind that no city of the size of Portland is more ready to sustain such an exhibition than this, and Portland herself is to be congratulated upon the completeness of the whole fair and the success which has attended it.

WM. SCHEFFLER'S ST. HELENA

SANITARY, VACUUM DISTILLED GRAPE BRANDY AND GOOD OLD EDGE HILL WINES.

Mr Scheffler is sole proprietor of the principle known as the vacuum process of distilling, by which the fusil oils are left with the residue and not incorporated with the brandy, leaving it pure and free from all deleterious substances which does and must exist in all alcoholic liquors distilled by the usual process of boiling heat. California Physicians have pronounced their preference of it to all other. Doctor Cox, government revenue officer at Cincinnati, Ohio, says in his report, that after ten years' of close investigation he can safely say that very few, if any, pure wines or brandy are exported from the Old Continent to this. He has found none in his many analyses—that all are doctored before leaving France. The French Consul at Buenos Ayres writes home to his government that so much complaint is made there of the appearance of litharge and other dangerous drugs in all their French wines, that there is great danger of losing the trade of the Argentine States. Other proofs could be cited were it necessary, to prove the superiority of the best class of California wines and brandy. Orders from responsible parties, addressed to Wm. Scheffler, or Geo. H. Beach, St. Helena, Napa county, Cal., will receive prompt attention.

FALSE IMPRESSION.

It is generally supposed by physicians and the people generally that Dyspepsia cannot invariably be cured, but we are pleased to say that GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER has never, to our knowledge, failed to cure Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint in all its forms, such as Sour Stomach, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, bad taste in the mouth, &c. Out of the 60,000 dozen bottles sold last year not a single failure was reported, but thousands of complimentary letters received from Druggists of wonderful cures. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sample Bottles 10 cents. Regular size 75 cents. For sale by Hodge, Davis & Co.

No Hospital Needed.

No palatial hospital needed for the Oregon Blood Purifier patients, nor large salaried puffers to tell what it will do or cure, as it tells its own story by its certain and absolute cures at home.

THE LOST ATLANTIS.

EVIDENCES SHOWING THAT IT DID REALLY EXIST.

A Land Covering a Large Part of the Atlantic Ocean—The People Rich, Powerful and Civilized, Penetrate both America and Europe—The Land Suddenly Ingulfed by the Sea, in a Mighty Convulsion of Nature.

[Edward H. Thompson in Popular Science Monthly.

Our sturdy worker in the copper mines of Lake Superior finding both himself and his vein of copper growing poorer day by day, determines to seek some more paying claim in the as yet unexplored portion of the copper country. He gathers his kit of tools together and starts, and, after many a hard hour's travel over the wild and rugged country finds a region with abundant signs of copper, and where seemingly no human foot has trod since creation's dawn.

He strikes a rich vein and goes steadily to work digging and blasting his way to the richer portions, when suddenly, right in the richest part, he finds his lead cut off by what looks to his experienced eye marvelously like a mining shaft. Amazedly he begins to clear out of the pit the fallen earth and the debris of ages, and the daylight thus let in reveals to his astonished gaze an immense mass of copper raised some distance from the original bottom of the pit on a platform of logs, while at his feet lie a number of strange stone and copper implements—some thin and sharp like knives and hatchets, others huge and blunt like mauls and hammers—all being left in such a manner as though the workmen had just gone to dinner and might be expected back at any moment. Bewildered, he ascends to the surface again, and looks about him. He sees mounds that from their positions are evidently formed from the refuse of the pit, but these mounds are covered with gigantic trees, evidently the growth of centuries; and, looking still closer, he sees that these trees are fed from the decayed ruins of trees still older—trees that have sprung up, flourished, grown old, and died since this pit was dug or these mounds were raised. The more he thinks of the vast ages that have elapsed since this pit was dug, that mass of copper quarried and raised, the more confused he becomes; his mind cannot grasp this immensity of time.

"Who were these miners? when did they live? and where did they come from?" are the questions he asks himself, but gets no answer. However, one fact is patent to him: that, whoever they were, they will not now trouble his claim; and, consoled by this reflection, he goes to work again.

The traveler, in wandering through the dense and almost impenetrable forests of Central and South America, suddenly finds himself upon a broad and well-paved road, but a road over which in places there have grown trees centuries old. Curiously following this road, he sees before him, as though brought thither by some Alladdin's lamp, a vast city, a city built of stone,—buildings that look at a distance like our large New England factories,—splendid palaces and aqueducts, all constructed with such massiveness and grandeur as to compel a cry of astonishment from the surprised traveler,—an immense but deserted city, whose magnificent palaces and beautiful sculpturing are inhabited and viewed only by the iguana and centiped. The roads and paths to the aqueducts, once so much traveled as to have worn hollows in the hard stone, are now trodden only by the ignorant mestizo or simple Indian. Of this deserted home of a lost race, the traveler asks the same question as the miner, and the only answer he gets from the semi-civilized Indian is a laconic "Quien sabe?" And who does know?

The curious and scientific world, however, are not so easily answered, and various are the theories and conjectures as to these diggers of mines and builders of mounds and strange cities. One of the most plausible of these—one believed by many scientists to be the true theory—is this: Ages ago the Americas presented a very different appearance from what they now do. Then an immense peninsula extended itself from Mexico, Central America, and New Granada, so far into the Atlantic that Madeira, the Azores, and the West India Islands are now fragments of it. This peninsula was a fair and fertile country, inhabited by rich and civilized nations—a people versed in the arts of war and civilization,—a country covered with large cities and magnificent palaces,—their rulers, according to tradition, reigning not only on the Atlantic continent, but over islands far and near, even into Europe and Asia. Suddenly, without warning this whole fair land was ingulfed by the sea in a mighty convulsion of nature.

Now, this catastrophe is not impossible or even improbable. Instances are not wanting of large tracts of land, several hundred miles in extent, disappearing in a like manner. The island of Ferdinandea suddenly appeared and after a while as suddenly disappeared. In 1819, during an earthquake in India, an immense tract of land near the river Indus sank from view, and a large lake now occupies its place.

The whole bed of the Atlantic, where Atlantis is said to have been situated, consists of extinct volcanoes. The terrible Lisbon earthquake of 1755, and the later American shock, created a commotion throughout the whole Atlantic area.

That Atlantis possessed great facilities for making a sudden exit, cannot be doubted. Its very situation gives good color to the narratives of ancient Grecian historians and Toltecian traditions, that "It disappeared by earthquakes and inundations."

Not only is it within bounds of possibility that it might have occurred, but, if traditions so clear and distinct as to be almost authentic history are to be believed, then it did occur. Listen to what one of the most cautious of ancient writers, Plato, says: "Among the great deeds of Athens, of which recollection is preserved in our books, there is one that should be placed above all others. Our book tells us that the Athenians destroyed an army that came across the Atlantic seas and insolently invaded Europe and Asia, for this sea was then navigable; and beyond the straits where you place the Pillars of the Hercules was an immense island, larger than Asia and Libya combined. From this island one could pass easily to the other islands, and from these to the continent beyond. The sea on this side of the straits resembled a harbor with a narrow entrance, but there is a veritable sea, and the land which surrounds it is a veritable continent. On this island of Atlantis there reigned three kings with great and marvelous power. They had under their domain the whole of Atlantis, several of the other islands, and part of the continent. At one time their power extended into Europe as far as Tyrrhenia, and, uniting their whole force, they sought to destroy our country at a blow; but their defeat stopped the invasion, and gave entire freedom to the countries this side of the Pillars of Hercules. Afterward, in one day and one fatal night, there came mighty earthquakes and inundations, that engulfed that warlike people. Atlantis disappeared, and then that sea became inaccessible on account of the vast quantities of mud that the engulfed island left in its place." It is possible that the debris said to have been left by this catastrophe might be identical with or the nuclei of the sargazo field that, many centuries later, Columbus found almost impenetrable. Again, Plato, in an extract from Proclus, speaks of an island in the Atlantic whose inhabitants preserved knowledge from their ancestors of a large island in the Atlantic, which had dominion over all other islands of this sea.

Plutarch, in his life of the philosopher Solon, Herodotus, and other ancient writers, speak of this island as a known fact; and it is impossible to believe otherwise than that Seneca thought of Atlantis when he writes in his tragedy of "Medea": "Late centuries will appear, when the ocean's veil will lift to open a vast country. New worlds will Thetys unveil. Ultima Tuule [Iceland] will not remain the earth's boundary." He evidently believed in the unknown island and continent, and knew it would not remain forever unknown.

Diodorus Siculus says that "Opposite to Africa lies an island which, on account of its magnitude, is worthy to be mentioned. It is several days distant from Africa. It has a fertile soil, many mountains, and not a few plains, unexcelled in their beauty. It is watered by many navigable rivers, and there are to be found estates in abundance adorned with fine buildings." Again he says, "Indeed, it appears, on account of the abundance of its charms, as though it were the abode of gods, and not of men."

The situation, the description of the country—in fact, every particular—agrees precisely with our idea of Atlantis; and what other land now in existence agrees in any way with this description—what islands of magnitude that contain navigable rivers, large fertile plains, and mountains?

Turning from our well-known ancient writers, we find in all the traditions and books of the ancient Central Americans and Mexicans a continual recurrence to the fact of an awful catastrophe, similar to that mentioned by Plato and others.

Now, what are we to believe? This, that either the traditions and narratives of these ancient writers and historians of both lands are but a tissue of fabrications, evolved from their own brains, with perhaps a small thread of fact, or else that they are truths, and truths proving that the Americas, instead of being the youngest habitation of man, are among the oldest, if not, as De Bourbourg affirms, the oldest.

Brasseur de Bourbourg, who, Baldwin says, has studied the monuments, writings, and traditions left by this civilization more carefully and thoroughly than any man living, is an advocate of this theory, and to him are we indebted for most of our translations of the traditions and histories of the ancient Americans.

To the imaginative and lovers of the marvelous, this theory is peculiarly fascinating, and the fact that there is plausible evidence of its truth adds to the effect. With their mind's eye they can see the dreadful events as recorded by Plato, as in a panorama. They see the fair and fertile country, filled with people, prosperous and happy; the sound of busy life from man and beast fills the air. Comfort and prosperity abound. The sun shines clear overhead and the huge mountains look down upon the cities and villages at their feet, like a mother upon her babes; all is a picture of peacefulness. Suddenly, in a second, all is changed. The protecting angels become destroying fiends, vomiting fire and liquid hell upon the devoted cities at their feet, burning, scorching, strangling their wretched inhabitants. The earth rocks horribly—palaces, temples, all crashing down, crushing their human victims flocked together like so many ants. Vast rents open at their very feet, licking with huge, flaming tongues the terrified people into their yawning mouths. And then the inundations. Mighty waves sweep over the land. The fierce enemies, fire and water, join hands to effect the destruction of a mighty nation.

How they hiss and surge, rattle and seethe. How the steam rises, mingled with the black smoke, looking like a mourning veil, that it is; and, when that veil is lifted, all is still—the quiet of annihilation! Of all that populous land, naught remains save fuming, seething mud. It is not to be supposed that all perished in that calamity. Long before this they had spread over the portion of the Americas contiguous to the peninsula, building cities, palaces, roads and aqueducts, like those of their native homes; and adventurous pioneers continually spreading north, east and westward, their constant increase of numbers from their former homes enabling them to overcome the resistance offered to their progress by both natives and nature, till at last they reached and discovered the copper country of Lake Superior. That they appreciated this discovery is evinced by the innumerable evidences of their works, and of their skill in discovering the richest and most promising veins. Wherever our miners of the present day go they find their ancient fellow-craftsmen have been before them, worked the richest veins, and gathered the best copper; and it is supposed that they continued thus till the terrible blotting out of their native country cut short all of this, and left this advancing civilization to wither and die like a vine severed from the parent stem.

Having no further accession to their numbers, and being continually decimated by savages and disease, they slowly retreated before the ever advancing hordes. Gradually, and contesting every step, as is shown by their numerous defensive works along their path, they were forced back to their cities on this continent, that had been spared them from the universal destruction of their country, where the dense and almost impassable forests afforded them their last refuge from their enemies, and where, reduced by war, pestilence and other causes, to a feeble band, their total extinction was only a matter of time. Such is probably the history of this lost civilization; and such would have been the history of our civilization had we in our infant growth been cut off from receiving the nourishment of the mother countries.

Within the last twenty-five years, all sciences relating to the past and present of man have been enormously developed. Old, worn-out, useless theories have been discarded, new facts have taken their places, discoveries have followed discoveries—each discovery helping to form, link by link, the chain of human history.

We are beginning to perceive that we are but yet young in the knowledge of human history; that we have as yet picked up but a bright pebble of thought or glittering shell of theory, while before us lies the whole vast sea of human history unexplored. That we are beginning to acknowledge this, is a good sign; for when a man or mankind acknowledge their ignorance, they have at least a sure foundation to build upon.

Again, the spirit of bigotry—the spirit that told men to scorn and deride Galileo and Columbus—is fast passing away; and in its stead comes the spirit of rationality,—a spirit that tells men to look upon a new idea or theory, even if it does run outside of the accustomed rut, with a reasoning if not favorable eye. And we have faith, as science grows to grander proportions and dispels some of the mist that now envelops it, that some day not far distant will bring forward an historic Edison that shall bring together the faint voice of the prehistoric past and the bright, clear voice of the present; that some future Champollion will discover, among the ruined cities of the Americas, an American Rosetta-stone that will complete the chain of human history. "The noblest study of mankind is man."

Again the Standard and Farmer are troubling themselves about THE OREGONIAN'S reports of the wheat market. Neither of those papers is a news journal, neither of them has original quotations by telegraph, neither of them has any account of the state of European crops except what they get from THE OREGONIAN'S dispatches, and neither of them evinces either industry or intelligence in collecting information about the local market. During all the fluctuations of the past month, covering a range of prices from $1 75 to $2 per cental, the Standard has never changed its quotations; and though we do not trouble ourselves to look after the quotations of that sleepy concern called the Farmer, we may suppose that it has followed the Standard's example. These two journals are both envious of THE OREGONIAN in consequence of their dependence on it for all kinds of news. It may be as well to add that the Standard has stated prices too low for a month past by an average of ten cents per cental—a thing THE OREGONIAN never would do and could not afford to do. But we need not trouble ourselves further about the Farmer and Standard, as the only claim either of them has to support or credit is the fact that they reprint a portion of THE OREGONIAN'S news after it has become stale through time and has already been read by everybody in the country who takes an interest in the news and markets. Other products are equally misquoted in those unreliable sheets, eggs for instance having fluctuated whole week between 25 and 37 cts. per dozen and the Standard never changing its quotations.

The improvement in the wheat market indicated in our dispatches is having some effect on the local market, buyers bidding up to $1 90 or a small advance much more freely.

Recent charters at San Francisco include the Reaper, 1465 tons, wheat to Liverpool at £3 5s; Cork, £3 7s 6d; Continent, £3 12s 6d. Lintram, 1674 tons, wheat to Liverpool at £3 3s 9d; Cork, £3 6s 3d; Continent, £3 11s 3d; Alameda, 1474 tons, wheat to Cork at £3 6s 6d; Continent, £3 11s 3d.

OVERALLS
Are sold by leading dealers in this city and on this coast, because—
"THEY CONTAIN THE BEST MATERIAL,
ARE SEWN WITH LINEN THREAD,
And ARE THE MOST PERFECT FITTING."
In putting on or taking off Overalls, the strain on the crotch often causes them to rip; and to remedy this we are making a continuous strip of cloth, extending the entire length of both sides of the Overall from the crotch, and secured thereto at every point. Under these improvements, we claim that our Overalls will stand greater strain than any other make in the market.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN
The Most Successful Physician on the Pacific Coast.
IN THE TREATMENT OF ALL
CHRONIC AND DIFFICULT DISEASES.
HAS RETURNED AFTER AN EXTENSIVE tour of the Eastern States, for the past four months. The Doctor while absent visited all the principal Medical institutions in the large cities of the United States, and comes back with all the modern methods, instruments and appliances known to the most scientific men in the profession. The Doctor has also brought charts and manikins to illustrate his lectures.
DR. PAUL M. BRENAN has been fifteen years lecturing on the Laws of Life and Health. In his private and public lectures he has taught men and women the true system of life, how to be healthy and happy, if they would only be guided by his wise counsel. But all cannot hear his delightful and instructive lectures, nor can he tell everything necessary for suffering humanity to know from the public rostrum before a promiscuous audience. There remains much to be learned from him as his experience extends over broad fields of active professional life. This knowledge so necessary to the welfare of the sufferer can only be gleaned by private Professional Consultation at his office.
His experience in the various parts of Europe and America give him such opportunities of learning the delicate diseases which the human family are prone to their mode of treatment and permanent cure, as no other physician on the Pacific Coast can claim. He has not only treated these diseases most successfully, but has made them a life study, as a few moments' consultation will prove.
He has become an expert in the treatment of disease, weakness and derangement of the reproductive organs of both male and female, including diseases caused by the
FOLLIES OF YOUTH.
Such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.
IT IS TRUE
That persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician [illegible] from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases [illegible] their constitutions be one corrupted [illegible] broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.
